

Students from Francis Holland School on Bourne Street held an art and photography display that showcased their artistic talents. Pupils from the lower and upper sixth forms created works that ranged from traditional paintings to more abstract pieces, which were made using a mix of media.

Headmistress Lucy Elphinstone said: "Art at FHS has always been a particular strength of the school, and this year's A-level exhibition glowed with vibrant colour and form.

"Under the guidance of Miss Joanna Arlington, the students produced work of originality and talent. We are delighted to see such creativity flourishing in the school."
